TWIN BILL WON BY CITY THEATER BASEBALL TEAM

Swamp Burnall Smokes in Second Game by Uneven Score of 25 to 0

In a hotly contested double header played at the Ocean ball park the Daly City Theater baseball team continued their unbroken string of victories by defeating the Burnall Smokes by the score of 8 to 2 in the frist contest and 25 to 0 in the second.

The feature of the first encounter was Charley Sheridan's excellent work on the mound. He allowed only four hits and struck out twelve opposing batters.

The theater team led throughout, and at no time during the game was the result in doubt.

The second game proved a rout for the Burnall Smokes, the theater team taking the decision by the lopsided score of 25 to 0.

This result was in a large measure due to the great pitching of Menicucci, who allowed only one hit and struck out twelve men in seven innings.

Another feature of this game was the hard hitting of Charlie Ferrando and Johnny Campagno, who each had a clean record of four hits out of four times at bat. Salvino also did good work with the stick, collecting three bingles out of three tries. All the other members of the team collected at least one hit to make a grand total of twenty-four base hits for the afternoon.

RESOLUTION IS ADOPTED FOR CLEAN SHOWS

State Congress Says Better Pictures Should Be Shown Here

The California Congress of Parents and Teachers at the state board meeting held in Southern California last week adopted the following resolution on Wednesday, July 11, in a cooperative movement to promote the production of a better class of motion pictures:

"We commend the action taken by other organizations demanding the production of clean and wholesome films, and pledge our cooperation by carrying out our motion picture policy as follows:

"The motion picture problem is a complimented one which can only be solved by the producer, exhibitors and the public accepting their respective responsibilities. We therefore ask that producers

"1— Grade films as to their audience before released to the distributor, (a) adults; (b) family; (c) children. 2—Do not inject off-color sequences into family films. 3—Produce more stories about decent people. 4—Keep stars, who are favorites with children, in wholesome pictures. 5—Depict less drinking in pictures. 6—Eliminate scenes demonstrating the technique of committing crime.

"That theater managers in residential communities: 1—Discontinue double bill. It is physically harmful to children and one of the films billed is usually unwholesome. 2—Provide suitable family programs for Friday and Saturday nights. 3—Discontinue the special advertising, free tickets, gifts, serials, or special state acts encouraging children's attendance, unless the entire program is approved for children.

"That parents: 1—Select their family films. 2—Go with their children to the movies.

"That every socially minded person realize that he has a responsibility to go to the fine pictures as well as to stay away from the poor ones.

"That motion picture appreciation be made part of the school curriculum."

Passage of the resolution means the enlistment of 200,000 California fathers and mothers in the clean film campaign.

AUXILIARY TO OLD GLORY POST HEARS REPORTS

Many Distinguished Visitors Attend Meeting of Great Interest to Members

(By E. D.)

The last regular meeting of Old Glory Auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars, was conducted by Senior Vice President Collins, who had a very interesting meeting.

The delegates to the state encampment, who had just returned from San Diego, had prepared an interesting report, which was read and received a number of complimentary adulations by the visiting department officers.

Sister Collins extended the fraternal welcome to the following distinguished visitors: The newly elected Department President Hubbard, Department Secretary Nealy, Council of Administration Member Donahue, Assistant Guard Hebb and Flag Bearer Pechinino of Old Glory. Each of these guests was presented with a beautiful corsage by the acting president.

The bi-county council met last Saturday evening at Redwood City, President Augustus presiding. After the regular business meeting had been concluded, refreshments were served to the comrades and sisters present.

The whist committee will hold the next regular monthly whist games on July 24 in the Eagles Hall. Comrades and sisters are urged to come and bring their friends.

The Ladies' Sewing Circle will have the next meeting at the home of Sister Elsie Lewis, Wednesday, July 25.

VITAL MINING PROBLEMS WILL BE DISCUSSED HERE

Meet of American Mining Congress Should Prove Of Great Interest

By J. W. MARCHBANK
(Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work)

Preparations are under way for a comprehensive program at the coming session of the American Mining Congress. The meeting will open in San Francisco on September 24, and judging from the widespread interest will be a memorable one in the history of the industry in this part of the country.

Recognition of the important place of mining in the economic structure makes every convention of the leaders of the industry of concern to all the people, in whatever walk of life they may find themselves. Among the subjects to be taken up at the meeting will be NRA codes as they affect the industry; the industry's place in the economic revival of the West; the operation of non-ferrous metals.

Men of national prominence have been invited to address the assembled miners, including United States Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, and Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator.

Latest news of the probable increase in the price of silver, as well as gold, comes in a bulletin of the Mining Congress. We read:

"We are reliably informed that the White House prophesied to a senator of one of the westrn states and to a silver producer recently that 75-cent silver could be expected this fall.

"Such a prophecy from any President would be worthy of consideration, but from the present occupant of the White House it becomes of more than ordinary import. It discloses he is in sympathy with the hopes of silver producers, feels that a rise in prices will help the country generally, and is anxious to help out the present situation.

"It also develops that the President has been informed that 75-cent silver for domestic producers would be nearly equivalent to the $1.29 price of silver's heyday, because of cuts in mining and smelting costs since the late nineties.

"Taken together with the substantial drop in silver stocks at refineries, the situation appears to be looking up for silver men. The April total of 11,865,000 ounces was the highest on record, while the June figure of 7,174,000 ounces is the lowest since last December.

"Cuts in May were largely traceable to Mexican curtailment of nearly 1,000,000 ounces and a United States drop of 100,000 ounces. Canadian output increased nearly 500,000 ounces and Russian exports to Great Britain jumped nearly 4,000,000 ounces over the same month of last year."

Activities are brisk in various sections of California. Oregon, too, is making progress. Errol MacBoyle, manager of the Idaho-Maryland Company, anounced at the time the Brunswick mine in Nevada county was taken over, that he would employ an additional 300 men within a year. That is indicative of expansion all along the line.

Up in Yuba County the Snowden Hill mine, owned by a group of men of Mission San Jose, has been leased to G. E. Weisbaum of San Francisco. It is an old mine, owned at one time by the governor of New Hampshire. It is a drift gravel property.

The Sacramento Bee tells of a new era of mining in Oregon. Twenty-seven men are employed at the Pacific States mine, in the Medford section. The company is sinking a shaft in one of the tunnels and has a crew of men drifting to the sixty foot depth. It is said to be the first time in the history of mining in the Medford section that exploration work has ben carried downward along extensive gold-bearing quartz deposits.

$20,000 OFFER FOR WINOOKA REFUSED

Winooka has been in the J. W. Marchbank private stables at Tanforan since his arrival from the East, several weeks ago.

Polson, trainer of the noted thoroughbred, is said to have turned down an offer of $20,000 for the stallion on instructions from Winooka's owners, saying they would not sell for less than $25,000.

Polson plans to sail from Los Angeles with the horse for Australia Saturday, July 28.

PROMINENT DALY CITY GIRL MARRIES

Miss Rose Scalia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Scalia of Irvington street, became the bride of Charles Denike of San Francisco, Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock, at Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church in Daly City. Rev. Father Noonan performed the ceremony.

The bride was charmingly gowned in a white satin dress with yoke and sleeves of lace. She wore a long tulle veil that formed a small cap, which was held in place by clusters of orange blossoms. Her shower bouquet was of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Marie Scalia, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Miss Catherine Denike, the groom's sister, was bridesmaid. Both wore white taffeta gowns with small hats to match and carried shower bouquets of white bouvardia tied with huge white chiffon bows.

Following the ceremony, a reception and dinner was given in the Red Room of the Fairmont Hotel for nearly 200 relatives.

After an airplane trip to Los Angeles, the young couple will reside in their own home at Bayview Hills terrace in San Francisco.

V. F. W. LOCAL POST IS HONORED AT ENCAMPMENT

Awarded Annual Efficiency Trophy as Best Post in Department

(By Fred R. Linser, Publicity)

At the annual encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Old Glory Post No. 2044, of this city, was awarded the annual Efficiency Trophy for being the most efficient post in the department. We are proud to be in that class, and the beautiful trophy will be on display in Daly City in the near future.

The San Mateo- Santa Clara Counties Council, V. F. W., was more than honored by the election of the department commander for 1935, Commade Edward M. Seacord of San Jose being elevated to the highest position in our command. With his dynamic personality, his business ability and his keen interest in veterans, and supported by Comrade Dick Flatland, department junior vice commander, of San Francisco; Comrade Charles Gavin, who was re-elected department quartermaster, and with the appointment of Comrade Imback of Richmond to his important office of department of staff, and Comrade Hubbard to the technical post of department inspector, we know that Commander Secord will have the most successful year in our history and the V. F. W. will be the most outstanding organization in California.

The delegates from this post brought back word that Comrade W. H. Augustus of San Mateo was elected as member of the Department Council of Administration from this district. Comrade Augustus is, and always has been, one of the most constructive, most tireless workers in our ranks, and his elevation to the important position is one of absolute confidence, and the council membership is with him in a body and prom-

ENGINEER SAYS TAX ALLOTMENT IS EXORBITANT

Claims the County Has No Right to Spend Gas Money in Cities

Appearing before the County Board of Supervisors at their regular meeting, Monday, the county engineer entered a protest against the tentative award to thirteen San Mateo County municipalities of $41,000 from the the county's share of the state gasoline tax fund, made recently by the board.

After hearing the protest at some length, the board postponed final action for two weeks.

The cities had originally requested the sum of $82,000, but were satisfied with the $41,000 tentatively offered.

There appeared the possibility of formation of a health and welfare commission to care for the needs of migratory workers in the county, after a request had been made for such a body by Mrs. Robert McWilliams of Burlingame, representing a number of coastside ranch owners.

She suggested that the body be composed of one supervisor, county engineer, health and welfare director and two laymen experienced in such work. The matter was referred to Dr. H. E. Morrison, county health director, who was asked to study the plan and report to the board for a final decision.

George Roussel was named a member of the Belmont Board of Fire Commissioners to fill a vacancy.

Action on the Emerald Lake fire district proposal was deferred for two weeks on the suggestion of Supervisor Poole.

The district attorney ruled that the board should eliminate several sections of agricultural land from the Montara lighting district.

This action had already been decided upon by the supervisors, after they met previously as a board of equalization in conjunction with a number of property owners of the section, who protested against inclusion of their lands for assessment purposes.

BETROTHAL OF CLARA HOADLEY IS ANNOUNCED

Miss Clara Hoadley and Miss Helen Rutledge entertained a number of their young friends Friday evening in San Francisco, just before the departure of Miss Rutledge for Seattle, where she is to be married soon to James Sullivan.

Miss Hoadley, although now residing in San Francisco, had lived for many years on Crocker avenue in this city, and graduated from the Crocker school. She has a host of friends here who all wish herself and Mr. Van Dergrift many years of happiness.

PRODUCTION OF ALASKA MINES IS CONTRASTED

Note Increase During Past Twelve Months Over Previous Period

Mines in Alaska produced minerals worth $10,366,000 in 1933, as against $11,638,000 in 1932, according to an announcement made by the Interior Department through the Geological Survey. The total value of the mineral output of the territory since 1880 is $663,595,000.

The following table shows in summary form the mineral output of Alaska for 1933 and, for comparison, the production of the same minerals in 1932:

Value of Mineral Output of Alaska in 1933 and 1932

	1933	1932
Gold	$ 9,701,000	$10,209,000
Copper	1,900	550,500
Silver	55,000	66,000
Coal	481,000	513,500
Lead	85,600	75,600
Miscellaneous mineral products, including petroleum, platinum metals, tin, etc.	41,500	223,400
Total	$10,366,000	$11,638,000

In the foregoing estimates, as well as in later statements in this article, it should be noted specially that the value of the gold has been computed at the old price of $20.67 an ounce and does not take into account the fact that for a part of the year gold was quoted at as much as $35 an ounce. This procedure was adopted to make the statistics for 1933 comparable with those that have been used for earlier years. Had the average price of gold for the year, estimated as $25.50 an ounce, been used in the foregoing estimates the value of Alaska's gold production would have been about $2,250,000 more than the value stated. For the other mineral commodities the average price for the year has been used in the computations.

In spite of the decreased output indicated, these figures should not be interpreted as showing a real waning in mining interest. The drop in the production of gold, copper and some of the other commodities is due to obvious specific causes, which will be pointed out in detail in the succeeding paragraphs, in which notes on the individual mineral commodities are given. As will be evident, most of these causes—for instance, the exceptionally dry weather, which deprived the placer miners of a normal supply of water for their mining operations—are of a distinctly temporary character and not significant as to permanent trends. Furthermore, just as Alaska was among the last of the regions to feel the effects of the oncoming depression, so it is among the last to feel the beneficial effects of the return to normal.

The output of gold from Alaska comes from both lode or hard-rock and placer mines. In 1933 this output was distributed between the types of mines in the proportion of about 47 to 53—$4,549,000 from lodes and $5,152,000 from placers. This proportion for the entire period that gold mining has been in progress in Alaska has been about 34 and a half to 65 and a half. The producing gold lodes are widely distributed through the territory, but nearly three-quarters of the output came from lodes in southeastern Alaska, where accessibility to deep water routes of communication and other favorable conditions have permitted the successful mining of immense tonnages of low-grade gold ore. In some of the larger lode mines the higher price of gold has been used as an opportunity not of making a larger profit but of mining lower-grade material that might otherwise be below the limit of recovery. In this way the operators have not only increased the life of their properties but also, by creating additional reserves, contributed to practical conservation.

The output of placer gold was about a third of a million dollars less than in 1932. However, it should be realized that this comparison is made with a year of especially large production, for the placer-gold output in 1932 was larger than that of any other year since 1918. It should also be realized that in 1933, owing to the dry weather throughout most of interior Alaska, the water supply of many camps was so deficient that they were forced to suspend operations for a month or more, and even the larger plants were able to keep running only on a much reduced scale and without adequate preparation of ground for subsequent work. Hundreds of camps contributed to the output of placer gold, but those in the Yukon Basin contributed the greatest amount, and those in Seward Peninsula came next. Nearly 80 per cent of the total placer production of the territory was mined by dredges, of which 25 were active during 1933—14 in the camps in the Yukon Valley, 9 in Seward Peninsula, and one each in the Cook Inlet-Susitna and Kuskokwim regions. Together these dredges produced gold to the value of $4,146,000. They are estimated to have handled about 8,889,000 cubic yards of gravel, and the gold recovered was worth about 46.6 cents a cubic yard. No new dredges were built during the year, but five old dredges that had been idle for some time were again active in 1933. Five dredges that were active in 1932 were idle in 1933.

Perhaps the most notable event in the whole mineral industry of Alaska in 1933 was the cessation of productive mining at the great copper mines near Kennecott, in the Copper River region. This action was taken as a result of the extremely low selling price of copper, which made the operation of these mines no longer profitable, so that it was only the part of wise administration to suspend mining. Closing of the mines does not mean abandonment, and a small force is engaged in keeping the properties in such shape that they can be reopened whenever conditions justify such action. The interruption of production from these mines is seriously felt not only by the mining industry of the territory but by many of its other activities as well. For instance, the transportation of the ore from these mines, both within Alaska and to the States, was a large part of the business of the common carriers serving part of the territory. The only copper produced from Alaska ores in 1933 was recovered as a byproduct of ores whose principal value lay in other metals they contained, notably gold.

No Alaska ores are mined solely for their silver content. In the past most of the silver has been recovered as a minor constituent from the copper ores, and in 1933 the cessation of copper mining cut off this source of supply. Some silver, however, is also obtained as a byproduct from the lodes in which the principal valuable metal is gold, and some silver is also recovered from the bullion and dust produced from the gold placers. In 1933 silver to the value of $44,850 came from the gold lode mines and $10,150 from the placer mines—the total (157,150 ounces) having a value of of $55,000. The quantity and value of silver from the gold lode mines showed a marked increase over 1932, but the higher selling price in 1933 made the value of the silver derived from the gold placers about the same as in the preceding year, though the quantity was about 7,500 ounces less.

The lead produced from Alaska ores in 1933 amounted to 2,314,000 pounds, which at the average selling price for the year was worth $85,600. Most of it was recovered as a byproduct in connection with the mining of gold ores in southeastern Alaska. The quantity of lead was some 200,000 pounds less than in 1932 but the increase in selling price—3.7 cents against 3 cents—made its value more than $10,000 greater, and it was one of the few mineral commodities from Alaska to show a higher value in 1933 than in 1932.

Coal to the value of $481,000 was produced in 1933 from Alaska mines, principally in the Matanuska and Healy River fields. No Alaska coal is exported, but 21,524 tons was imported from the States, chiefly from Washington, and 14,009 tons from foreign countries, chiefly British Columbia, so that the total consumption of coal in Alaska in 1933 amounted to about 132,000 tons. Late in the year one of the producing mines was put out of commission through accidental breaks through to the surface, which allowed the workings to become flooded. Work at the other mines was carried on at practically the same rate as in preceding years.

Among the products that entered less largely into the Alaska mineral industry in 1933 may be mentioned petroleum, platinum metals, tin, and quicksilver. The total value of the miscellaneous products was $41,500, or considerably less than that of the similar group of products in 1932. The large decline is attributable principally to cessation of work in the large marble and limestone quarries of southeastern Alaska, whose products have been used extensively for trim and decorative purposes in buildings and in the manufacture of cement. It is likely that both these plants will resume operation shortly.

The foregoing notes are taken from a comprehensive report of the United States Geological Survey, entitled "Mineral Industry of Alaska in 1933," which was prepared by Philip S. Smith and will form one of the series of similar reports that the Geological Survey has issued to describe the progress of Alaska mining each year since 1904.

THANK CITY OFFICERS FOR CO-OPERATION

The committee on supervised play and recreation from the several units of Congress of Parents and Teachers of Daly City, and also the special committee from the Woman's Civic Club, greatly appreciate the efforts of the city council and the members of the Elementary School board in trying to solve what seems to be a very difficult problem, that of financing this movement.

Let us hope for good results from the co-operation received.

All mothers interested in this matter are asked to attend a meeting on Friday evening, July 20 (this evening) in the council chambers at the City Hall here at 8 o'clock for the purpose of further discussing ways and means to bring about fruition of this worth while project.

COOL DRINKS AT EVENING MEALS

Variety of Beverages With Special Appeal.

By EDITH M. BARBER

THESE warm days the business woman housekeeper is particularly interested in a cold beverage to serve with the evening quick meal. The preparation for this meal, even when simple, has probably not given her time to cool off after her trip home from the office, and she is particularly attracted by the idea of a cooling beverage.

While chilled beer, ginger ale and fruit juice by themselves are always refreshing, there are other cooling beverages which have special appeal. Some of us feel that coffee freshly made and poured over ice cubes and served with plain or whipped cream, or both, is refreshing and stimulating; others have the same feeling about tea, to which, by the way, I like to add a dash of ginger ale. Then there are the old-fashioned lemon or mixed orange and lemonades, which, although, not publicized much, are as popular as ever. Any fruit juice left over from the berries of the day before may be combined with canned grapefruit or pineapple juice and, if you like, with one of the carbonated beverages.

A glass pitcher, with its clinking ice and its natural garnish of frost, is cooling by its very appearance. By the way, a new idea for a garnish, if you have time for a trick, is to freeze the red cherries, now at the height of their season, in ice cubes, leaving the stem sticking out of the ice.

By the way, here is a note which has nothing to do with beverages, but which will appeal to the busy housewife. Sifted toasted bread crumbs are now obtainable in package form and are a time saver in the preparation of a number of main dishes.

Quick Meal.

Cold tongue
Waffle potatoes
Cauliflower with brown crumbs
Toasted sponge cake with crushed fruit
Grape iced tea

Method of preparation—Prepare beverage and chill. Prepare cauliflower and cook. Arrange tongue on platter. Arrange waffle potatoes. Crush fruit. Dress cauliflower by melting one teaspoonful butter and browning one-half cupful bread crumbs (dry) When crumbs are brown add one-quarter cupful butter and pour this sauce over cauliflower. Toast sponge cake.

Grape Iced Tea.

3 teaspoons tea
3 cups boiling water
1 pint grapejuice
4 tablespoons sugar
Juice of two lemons

Pour the boiling water on the tea, cover closely and allow to stand for five minutes. Then stir it from the bottom and strain. Add sugar, lemon juice and grapejuice. Chill thoroughly.

Fruit Nectar.

1 cup orange juice
1 cup lemon juice
2 qts. sparkling raspberry beverage
2 cups sugar
1 pt. pineapple juice
1 qt. ginger ale
Ice cubes

Mix together all juices and add the sugar. Just before serving add the ice and the charged beverages.

Fruit Punch.

1 cup grapefruit juice
1 cup grapejuice
¼ cup sugar
1 qt. sparkling lime beverage
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1 pt. sparkling water

Mix together juices, add sugar and nutmeg. Just before serving add carbonated beverages and pour over chopped ice.

Budapest.—Budapest is going to have romantic mustachioed policemen. An order has been issued that all mounted policemen from now on wear mustaches. It is considered not only conducive to military appearance and bearing but in line with the national tradition of dashing Magyar horsemen.

Whether the new hirsute glories of the mounted policemen will increase their efficiency is doubtful, but the men will certainly become doubly irresistible to the Budapest housemaids.

Finds Shortage of Babes Cause of Unemployment

Berlin.—Germany's propaganda ministry has figured out the real cause of unemployment here—it's the 15,000,000 children the reich's women didn't have the past fifteen years.

"You can work it out by figures," writes a ministry official, Dr. Hermann Thomalla, in the Nazi welfare organ.

"The chief reason we have unemployment today is because the German hausfrau hasn't had more children. There used to be 2,000,000 births annually. Now there are only 1,000,000. That means a loss of 15,000,000 since war days.

"These children would have been solely consumers, for they wouldn't yet have become old enough to become producers. They would have provided work for hundreds of thousands of workers, who are now on the dole."

"Yankee Doodle" Sung in Early Comic Opera

Philadelphia.—Where and when did the tune "Yankee Doodle" originate? Well, here's one answer.

"The Disappointment," said to be the first comic opera composed and published in the United States, contained a song entitled "Yankee Doodle," and the tune is practically the same as we know today. The composer was Andrew Barton.

Gay Table Cover

A good way to keep the dining-room table gay and attractive between meals is to cover it with a cloth decorated with applique. The materials may be white cotton cloth and the patchwork be in chintz, glazed or unglazed, and with or without pattern. Or the entire cover can be of plain one-tone chintz with the patchwork in contrasting colors. Both ways of developing the cover keeps the cost down to a minimum, yet without sacrificing any of the beauty.

HOW IT STARTED

By JEAN NEWTON

That Word "Schedule"

"SCHEDULE" is a familiar word in modern life. Today's routine of rush and bustle and "efficiency" and living by the clock has frequent use of it.

To those who stop to think about the real significance of the words they use, it would seem that "schedule" must have its origin in something indicating efficiency or system. Yet the source of the word is merely a "leaf" or a "page."

It is easy to comprehend of course that the "leaf" or "page" which was the source of our "schedule" which is a routine or system in the abstract was a page upon which such a system was written!

AVOIDING THE NAME JUNIOR

DEAR Mrs. Post: We would like to christen our baby with the same name as his father. But we hesitate because we do not want him to be called "Junior" by every one, which we have grown to dislike very much. Under these circumstances would it be very improper to write his name with the suffix 2nd?

Answer: You cannot call him 2nd because this means nephew or cousin of a man of the same name. "Junior" is son or grandson. But if you call your boy Jack if his father is John, or Fred if his father is Frederick, or Henry if his father is called Harry, no one will call him Junior unless you begin it, or at least encourage it.

* * * * * * *

My dear Mrs. Post: Will you tell me about a christening at home? What kind of invitation is sent and what refreshments are usually served?

Answer: Taking it for granted that you have consulted your clergyman and that he is willing to christen the baby in your house, you either telephone or else write on your card, "Baby's christening, Wednesday September 20, five o'clock r. v. p." Cover a small table with a white cloth or a piece of brocade and on it put the bowl that is to be used as the font—a silver one if you have it. If you haven't a silver one, use a china one, and lay flowers around it. The service is exactly the same as in church. The godmother holds the baby and the two other godparents stand next to her.

After the ceremony serve white almond cake, and caudle (a rather mild sort of eggnog with which every one is supposed to drink the baby's health).

* * * * * * *

Dear Mrs. Post: Would you say that a christening without having godparents is much the same as what you say about a wedding without the bride in the traditional white bridal veil and orange blossoms—"it is a frame with the picture left out." In the same way that a bride can be married without these trimmings, is it possible to christen a baby without having godparents?

Answer: Marriage is equally legal no matter what the bride wears. At a christening the service of some churches requires that a baby have "sponsors in baptism," that is, godparents—just as the marriage service requires that the bride be given a ring.

PROPRIETIES

DEAR Mrs. Post: The other day at the tennis club a boy who had been playing in the next court asked me very eagerly if I would play with him some day soon. Would it be improper for me to call him up?

Answer: I certainly would not telephone him, not because of any especial impropriety but because you would seem overeager to see him again. But if you see him at the club some day, there is no reason why you might not ask him casually, "Would you like to play?"

* * * * * * *

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it essential (in this day of unsettled living) to have an address on a man's visiting card? If there is no address on the card, should one be written on in pencil when necessary?

Answer: The address on a card is so convenient that it is best to have it put on, especialy as several successive addresses can be cut on the same plate. Of course, if you have no address on it and the person for whom you leave it does not know where you live, write in pencil.

* * * * * * *

My dear Mrs. Post: I am planning to be married this month and must have a very simple and small wedding. Several weeks ago a friend of mine had a shower party and invited almost every one of my friends. I feel as though I should invite to my wedding all these kind people who gave me lovely gifts, but how can I when I can't even include my own relations, outside of our immediate families? How does one draw the line in making up such a list?

Answer: I don't think that you can very well accept shower presents and then not invite the givers—let alone the friends who give the shower parties—to the wedding. You would better have said, "Thank you, Mary, but don't have a shower for me because I can't ask anyone but the family to my wedding." It is quite possible to cut your list as you please so long as you are consistent. Ask aunts and uncles and stop at first cousins. Or ask cousins you know well and omit those you never see. Ask really intimate friends, and no others.

Waterspouts

Ordinarily, waterspouts occur only in tropical waters, for the reason that the air in the tropics is always warm and moisture-laden and ready to condense upon meeting a sudden cool wind. However, waterspouts have been reported in the warm Gulf stream in Northern seas. These spouts are believed to occur when cold wintry blasts from the land pass out over the sea and meet the warm Gulf stream. Waterspouts last only a few minutes and are not dangerous to ships.

Survival of Sport Depends on Reduction of Taxation

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Lack of success in Chicago racing this year is attributed solely to excessive taxation of the sport. Colonel Matt J. Winn, managing director of several of the large tracks of the Illinois metropolis, has pointed out emphatically that relief must be had in order for the game to thrive. The position of sportsmen is succinctly put in these words:

"There is a crying need for less taxation on the sport. It has been conclusively shown that high taxes paid by the public tend to reduce the attendance and in that way defeat the object of the tax."

It's the old story of killing the goose that laid the golden egg. The state is entitled to a revenue from the sport of racing, but it must be of reasonable proportions if the pastime is to survive. I have the utmost faith in the public spiritedness of the members of the State Legislature and am confident they will see the justice of the position of sportsmen when presented to them in the right light.

In California the excessive taxation comes in the high commission on pari-mutuel pools. As is well known, the state abstracts four per cent from each of the pools. Added to the eight per cent allowed to the racing association under the present law, the total "take" is twelve per cent, an almost prohibitive figure.

A reduction is imperatively demanded from twelve per cent to nine per cent in order to put the California game on a basis enabling it to compete, both in the class of horses and in that other great magnet, good purses, with the racing anywhere else.

A report by Skillings' Mining Review says: "With practically all the world supplies of silver now earmarked for purchase or use by the governments of other countries, and with the world silver production at a low ebb . . . it must become apparent to all that whenever the purchase of the New York stocks of silver by the United States government have proceeded far enough . . . the price must move steadily upward, because of world scarcity."

PRICE FIXING GOES

The recent decision of the President to abandon price fixing features of some major industrial codes is of exceptional importance.

It stems from the growing belief that price fixing is inimical to the consumer and the small business man. The Darrow report, which was extensively publicized, concentrated attention on that.

There may be much to be said for price fixing, used as a weapon to eliminate destructive and wasteful competition. But there is grave doubt if the American people could ever be brought to stand for it as a permanent feature. Free competition, with each unit within an industry striving to give better service at a more reasonable price, is part of the American business tradition. When the President started the attempt to fix prices, he intimated that it was purely experimental—he is to be congratulated on making a change when he saw that it would not work as hoped for in the beginning.

A poll made by Fortune among executives of our principal industries discloses that 85 per cent of them believe that the main beneficial results of the NRA codes lie in their wage and working provisions—that great gains in this direction have been made, and that they should not be lost. That is certainly a progressive attitude, and now that price fixing is to be ended the labor features are again pre-eminent. The American people, as always, want labor to be amply paid and protected—but they do not want revolutionary changes made in our time honored governmental or industrial scheme of things.

Somebody Blundered

Study of the statistics reveals that a majority of the 756,500 automobile accidents in the United States in 1933 occurred on straight, dry roads in clear weather, and involved cars in good condition driven by persons with a year or more of experience. Over 75 per cent of these drivers were persons of mature age—from 25 to 64. The majority of the 30,000 deaths and 850,000 injuries must be attributed to blunders.

A recent analysis by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters shows what the blunders were. There are eight in all.

1. Drove too fast for conditions—this accounted for approximately three-fourths of all mishaps in 1933 assigned to driving blunders.
2. Failed to slow down at intersections.
3. Failed to keep to the right.
4. Tried to pass another car going in the same direction when view was obstructed.
5. Failed to slow down on approaching pedestrians.
6. Passed on the right of a preceding vehicle.
7. Ignored important traffic control devices.
8. Parked at dangerous spots.

If drivers will obey the eight common sense rules suggested by these violations, the annual accident record can be reduced to a negligible figure.

Says Henry L. Mencken, noted financial writer: "My private opinion is that the . . . big smashup is going to be next year, when tax bills come in and the people discover they have to be paid."

BEAUTY CONTEST AT SALINAS RODEO AS "SWEETHEARTS"

Leading cowboys of the West, including champions in all classes, are signing up for the California Rodeo and Horse Fair at Salinas, July 26 to 29, the big western rodeo of the year. Some of the toughest, buckingest and 'rarin'-to-go horses and steers of the world, according to the committee, will also be there to give the cowboys a few lessons on how not to "stay put."

The daily parade of cowboys and cowgirls will be one of the big events of the four day show. There will be hundreds of 'em, displaying their mounts and themselves to admiring thousands.

Two of the new features are a beef bull auction sale and a saddle horse sale. Both of these features have been urged by cattlemen and horsemen of California. Some of the most prominent stock breeders of the state are shipping in their bulls and saddle horses for these two events.

The big Saturday night Colmo del Rodeo is one of the greatest spectacles put on in the entire country. A glimpse of this parade will convince anyone that Salinas "knows how—and how."

And then there are the "Sweethearts." Beautiful girls from every nook and corner of the state will contest for the honor of being the "Sweetheart of the Rodeo,' an honor which carries with it one of the most enchanting trips in the world—a cruise on one of the crack Grace liners to New York and return. Every girl entered dreams of being the winner of this unique event, and when the governor introduces these girls at the beginning of the rodeo the big trial will be on.

As an additional event, it is expected that General Farley, the man who bosses the mails and the Democratic party, will be present to see how it is done in the city of Salinas, the home of the California Rodeo.

PREPARE VINTAGE FETE REVIVAL AT AT SAINT HELENA

Revival of one of the colorful California events of former years, the St. Helena Vintage Festival, promises to attract heavy motor travel to the Napa Valley town over the week end of September 1 to 3, according to the California State Automobile Association. Widespread interest is being shown, it is stated, in resumption of the festival, which was an annual event up to 1921. The celebration will herald the return of the Napa Valley grape industry to its old time activity. The famous Vintage Allegory and Pageant will be enacted as one of the main features of the festival, and exhibits of vineyard, orchard, and farm products will be presented in a huge tent. Other features will and farm products will be presented include a flower show, a Labor Day parade, a grand ball, sporting events, and a variety of carnival atractions.

Lubricating Doors

Door catches, striker plates and door bumpers require a lubricant to eliminate rattles and squeaks, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. Ordinary grease will suffice but there is danger of soiled clothing if grease or oil is used. To avoid this hazard try using ordinary pariffin. One may carry a cake of the kind used for sealing fruit jars in a pocket of the car. Even though it is applied excessively it can do no harm and will be found quite effective.

SOME BITTER PILLS

The government is dealing out bitterness to Puerto Rico in a big way. Two tons of quinine, enough for about 28,000,000 single doses, are being sent to that island for the campaign against malaria being made there. It is said that more than 50,000 sufferes from malaria are now being treated.

Question: What is the story of "The man in the moon"?

Answer: To everyone the world over "the man in the moon" is familiar. The features of this well known "person" are actually the surface features of our satellite. The Chaldeans, Egyptians, Greeks and Romans all had different stories to account for the presence of "the man in the moon." All stories agree, however, in saying that the man was banished to the moon for bad conduct on earth. The most modern story, although hundreds of years old, is that the old man went to a forest to collect wood for his fire. It was on a Sunday, but still he needed warmth. An angel met him returning with his bundle on his shoulders, and asked him if he had forgotten it was Sunday, when all men should rest. The weary old man replied that Sunday and Monday were alike to him, as he had to work every day in order to feed and warm himself. The angel said that as he could not observe Sunday on earth, he should observe Moonday in heaven forever. So now "the man in the moon" is still seen on a clear night, with the fagot of wood on his shoulders.

Grease Harms Brakes

Too much grease in the rear end of the car, combined with heat generated by the friction of differential gears, will sometimes force grease from the rear housing onto the brake lining, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. If grease constantly works onto the brakes it is advisable to have a service man install a vent in the upper side of the rear housing. This difficulty does not usually occur in the newer models.

COLUMN OF N. R. A. FACTS

INFORMATION regarding the N. R. A. will be furnished each week by W. H. CLAY, Chairman of the local N. R. A. Publicity Committee.

The New Deal has given women workers a chance to progress considerably in a comparatively short time, Miss Mary Anderson, Director of the Women's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor said in an address at the National Biennial Nursing Convention in Washington.

She lauded recent efforts to combat sweatshops that prior to the NRA were spreading like mushrooms. Conducive to their annihilation are code provisions for minimum wages, maximum hours, prohibition or regulation of industrial home work in certain codes and elimination of the labor of children under 16 in almost every case. Thousands of women in the textile and clothing industry are on a much better economic basis as a result of the codes, she felt.

Another advantage to women is that under the NRA they have the same work hours as men and cannot be exploited as a group by being forced to work longer hours than men who in the past because of organization have been better able to bargain for the eight hour day, it was pointed out.

"The New Deal is also helping to lessen the stranglehold on our industrial system of the double wage standard," Miss Anderson states. "This tradition of paying lower rates to women than to men was a vital factor in helping to bring on the depression. The vast majority of women workers constituted an ever cheaper and cheaper labor supply for competing employers to tap.

"The purchasing power of these women had sunk to such low ebb that they could not buy back their share of the goods they produced. It became necessary to supplement their inadequate earnings with private or public relief.

"Still this traditional low wage is a battling point in the making of codes. Many employers still argue for a lower minimum for women than men, forgetting or ignoring the fact that ruthless competition in juggling wages and allowing women to undercut men caused to a considerable degree the plights into which certain industries were plunged. Such employers have yet to see that they would be better off if wages and hours were excluded from the competitive field between the sexes.

"Whenever a proposed code has carried a sex differential, that is a lower minimum for women, considerable pressure by forces both within and without the NRA has been brought to bear for its elimination.

"It means a great gain for women that about 75 percent of the codes have no sex differential and that in others there is a narrowing of the difference in rates for men and women as compared with the past, when in some industries women were paid from 25 to 50 percent less than men. No amount of legislation and agitation in the past had been able to overcome such basic inequalities and injustices.

National Income Up: By May 1, total national income had increased 20 per cent over last May, according to the Research and Planning Division of NRA.

Employment and Payroll Gains: Contrary to the usual seasonal decline in employment in May, the factory employment index moved from 82.3 for April to 82.4 for May of this year. Last May the index was 62.6. The capital goods industries showed the largest gains, an increase of 2.3 per cent over April. The payrolls index was 67.1 for May, compared with 42.7 last May. (Bureau of Labor Statistics.)

Industries Report Benefits: The Men's Clothing Code Authority reports that NRA has put 25,000 people back to work and increased wages a million dollars per week. The Middle Atlantic Lumbermen's Association reports that "hundreds of small dealers facing utter elimination from cutthroat competition and unfair practices of their bigger competitors have been saved by the Retail Lumber Code."

Retail Stores Endorse NRA: Letters to the Cotton Garment code authority from more than 65 of the leading department stores, chain and mail order houses, buyers' organizations and jobbers througout the country heartily endorse NRA and promise continued cooperation. All state they are buying goods only from firms which are complying with their codes and that they insist on NRA labels on all merchandise for which these are provided.

Public Wants Blue Eagle: "That old Blue Eagle of NRA hasn't lost its appeal. We learn that every time that we take one away from a chiseler and hear him come howling home for another. That bird will stay put where the home purchasing agent can see it as an emblem of clean business —of the kind of establishment that citizens want in their home towns. You will hear more about it in the months to come, for we have come now to a point in NRA where we finally can turn to assisting business effectively in the task of administering its codes.——General Johnson to National Retail Credit Association.

Code For Canning Industry: It is estimated that this code, effective this month, will spread employment 30 per cent among non-seasonal employees and that average wages will be increased 47.6 per cent in the north, 47.4 per cent in the intermediate district, and 57.4 per cent in the south. Before NRA., payment of six and seven cents an hour in the south, and ten to twelve cents in the north, was not unusual. Child labor, hitherto extensively employed, has been outlawed and the industry is required to report by December 1 on improving the wage and hour provisions of the code.

Standards Provisions: Marked headway is being made under NRA in providing for the establishment of quality and labelling standards for food and industrial products. 135 out of 430 approved codes recently analyzed by the Consumers Advisory Board contain some form of standards provision. These range from actually prescribing minimum marketable standards to requiring that committees study the applicability of standardization and make recommendations on the adoption of grade labeling to the Administrator.

Tobacco Trade Codified: Fifty thousand workers, 79 per cent of whom are women, are affested by the code for the cigar manufacturing industry just approved. In order to curb the displacement of hand-workers which has been proceeding rapidly since 1920, the code provides that they shall be paid a lower rate than machine workers, although both classes will receive more than they did before the code was adopted. The codes for the wholesale and retail tobacco trades are expected to increase their total payrolls by 10 per cent.

New Office For Complaints: In order to centralize the receipt of all complaints which come into NRA, an Assistant Administrator for Field Administration has been appointed. The 48 States Compliance Officers, the Compliance Division in Washington and a new office which will probably be called the Code Authority Administration Office have all been placed under this Assistant Administrator. One of his main tasks will be to help Code Authorities to organize and function as rapidly as possible in order to turn over the work of administering the codes to these agencies.

DEATHS OF AGED CUT IN TRAFFIC SAFETY EFFORTS

Lives of aged persons whose lack of physical alertness makes them easy victims of traffic dangers can be saved by directing public attention to those hazards. This is indicated by the apparent results of an effort launched several months ago by the San Francisco Traffic Law Enforcement Board, according to a statement by the public safety department of the California State Automobile Association discussing the elderly pedestrian and the safety problem.

During the first three months of this year sixteen out of the twenty-eight pedestrians who lost their lives in traffic accidents in San Francisco were over 60 years of age. Three were between the ages of 80 and 90 years. The high proportion of aged persons in the traffic death list was further emphasized by the fact that only about 10 per cent of the population of the city is in the 60 years and over age bracket.

Aroused by these figures, the enforcement board launched a program of educational efforts and direct activities with the object of emphasizing to elderly persons themselves and to their families and others interested in their welfare the grave dangers confronting the aged pedestrian in traffic. Special attention was given to old people's homes and other institutions harboring large numbers of persons of advanced age.

Following the inception of this effort, it was noted that there was a distinct decrease in the number of traffic accidents involving old persons. At a meeting of the enforcement board held last week the coroner submitted a report on traffic fatalities in the city for the month of June, showing that out of nine traffic deaths in the city during that period only two were pedestrians, one aged 72 and the other 52.

This marked improvement was declared by the coroner to be due to a large extent to the efforts which have been made to emphasize the dangers which heavy city traffic present to the elderly pedestrian.

Worn Gear Sign

A sound of constant grinding coming from the rear end of the car while in high gear is a sign of worn or improperly fitted gears or bearings, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. Steps should be taken to remedy the trouble immediately because delay may permit additional damage to occur.

Keep Springs Clean

For normal spring action, as it is when a car is new, the springs should be kept clean, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. Some manufacturers recommend lubrication of springs while others do not. The best plan is to follow factory recommendations. All agree springs should be kept free from dirt, grit, etc.

OH! WHAT A BANQUET!

An undertaker's bill rendered in Baltimore in 1758 included these items: "47 pounds loaf sugar, 14 dozen eggs, 20 gallons white wine, 12 bottles red wine and 10 gallons rum." It would be interesting to know the number of mourners present to partake of such an array of refreshments.

SOME ANCIENT HAPPENINGS OF CITY REVIEWED

Incidents of Pioneer Days and Characters Recalled For Our Readers

(By An Old-Timer)

In compiling this series of incidents and the doings of pioneer characters of a quarter of a century ago for the readers of The Record, the writer aims to adhere strictly to true and interesting facts that have so entered into the scheme that has resulted in the wonderful upbuilding of this thrifty city of the North End.

This section has always been regarded as the most important portion of San Mateo County because of its many thousands of acres of unequalled garden lands and its close proximity to the City of San Francisco. In the earlier days, Mission Road or El Camino Real, at the "top of the hill," was known as El Portal, the only southern entrance to the great city of San Francisco. 'Twas a very muddy thoroughfare twenty-five years ago that afterwards became the first state highway unit in San Mateo County and California and at the same time the first unit of the Pacific highway, that now extends for a distance of 1800 miles from Tia Juana, Mexico, to Vancouver, British Columbia, via San Diego, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Tacoma and Seattle. This is a distinction that the people of Daly City can well regard with civic pride. This result was attained through the untiring efforts of the late John D. Daly, Supervisor "Good Roads" Jim Casey, John W. Marchbank, Edward Freyer, Assemblyman Henry Ward Brown and other public spirited pioneers. Four of the above named gentlemen have passed to the great beyond, leaving the indomitable John W. Marchbank, who has never faltered in his efforts of public spiritedness, and to him the credit is due for the establishment of our two banks, the Daly City Theater, the John D. Daly Public Library, and it was also mainly through his efforts that the five cent car fare limit was extended from the county line to the old historical El Portal at the "top of the hill" and scores of other advantages that will always be beneficial to our people.

The entire territory along the county line from the ocean to the bay, including Visitacion Valley and south to and including Tanforan, constituted Colma.

This newspaper was first established in October, 1908, and was called the North End Record, but was soon changed to the Colma Record. That name endured until Daly City was incorporated, when it was moved from a small building south of Matthew Grady's present market on San Pedro avenue to the Knowles Building (now the Masonic Hall) and the name was changed to the Daly City Record.

Those were memorable pioneer days when some people thought they hated others, but finally, when each succeeding skirmish was over, the readjustment brought the healthy conclusion that they did not hate at all. It was like one's idea that he hates spinach, caviar or lobster when he hasn't so much as tasted either. So, when some public welfare scheme came into the limelight everybody came to the conclusion that enmities are like eating barbed wire, decidedly bad tasting. Thus was the real spirit of neighborly fellowship twenty-five years ago.

Commencing in January, 1909, the writer will chronicle from week to week interesting pioneer incidents, and Editor Pitschke has our promise not to continue for more than fifteen years. The following is the first installment:

San Francisco's popular sheriff, Larry Dolan, was shaking hands with Colma friends.

Patsy McEvoy was chairman of the Board of Supervisors and Joseph H. Nash was county clerk, granting saloon licenses to Fahy Brothers and C. McAllif, Colma.

B. S. Green was postmaster at Colma and E. C. Johnson was postmaster at Vista Grande.

Dr. W. G. Beattie, Colma, appointed county health officer; Philip Fahey deputy in charge of burial permits at Colma.

Stanley Ketchel and Jack Johnson signed for a heavyweight championship bout at the Colma arena for October 12, the promoter being that Prince of the Sporting World, "Sunny Jim" Coffroth. Ketchel was to train at Joe Millitts' training camp.

Sheriff Robert S. Chatham of San Mateo County made a friendly visit to Colma.

George W. Savage, Hillcrest, elected school trustee.

One of Vista Grande's most popular citizens, John Bracken, 43, died. He was proprietor of Bracken's Hall Saloon.

Mrs. Emma Woolsey, the present Colma librarian, was president of Children's Aid Society.

Phillip Deller, Pride of the Hill Market, improving at St. Joseph's Hospital from an operation for appendicitis.

Dr. Ferdinand Bush, first dentist, located in Knowles building.

Dr. Rowland, on Peoria street, was the only physician at the "top of the hill," and Dr. Beattie at Colma.

Lumber Trees Threatened

Threat of a disease of ponderosa pine, California's most important lumber tree, apparently epidemic in character in the southwest, has caused the Forest Service to send out scouting crews to determine definately if the disease has entered the state.

The disease is known as the twig blight and its origin and effects are still being studied by scientists. Two crews made up of wood pathologists familiar with the blight will work in the northern and southern halves of the state, covering as rapidly as possible all areas where ponderosa and related pines of the yellow pine group occur, both within and outside the national forests and parks. One party is now in the Tahoe National Forest and another in the Angeles National Forest.

Ponderosa pine, whose legitimate name has been a subject of extended controversy, provides over 50 per cent of the average annual lumber cut and forms about 25 per cent of the timber stand of California. Formerly it was called western yellow pine by the Forest Service and California white pine by the lumbermen.

SERA PROGRAM IS BEING ENLARGED

The State Emergency Relief Administration's work program, now estimated to be providing sustenance for approximately 250,000 Californians, is restoring men and women to work in lines of industry for which they are trained or adapted, SERA officials affirmed recently.

Survey of nearly 60,000 persons employed upon work relief programs throughout the state reveals that 55 per cent are engaged in various kinds of construction work, while 45 per cent are following a dozen other vocations, including those that are usually grouped as "white collar" activities.

Women are not being forgotten. Of total work relief employment, women are filling more than 21 per cent of jobs available, and of work not classified as construction they have 53 per cent of employment.

Classified as professional, technical and women's work, so-called "white collar" jobs range from sewing and canning—fields occupied by women almost exclusively—through nursing, nutritional, health, safety and recreational vocations, to education, research, clerical and similar activities, as well as music, art and literature.

The SERA program is sufficiently flexible to meet conditions of unemployment by vocational surplusses in various parts of the state. Recent compilations indicated that approximately 58 per cent of employment in Los Angeles County is upon construction, while the percentages of this type of work relief in other leading counties are: San Francisco, 54; Alameda, 33, and San Diego, 71.

THE GANGSTER TYPE

By R. K. WILKINSON

©. Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

"THE only way," said Producer Howard Heyward, "to inject realism into a picture is to cast the players true to type. By this I mean only real mothers should play the part of screen mothers, war veterans the part of soldiers, cultured men the part of gentlemen—"

"And gangsters the part of gangsters!"

"Exactly. That's the meat in the coconut. Here we have a picture on which we are ready to begin production. The feature role is that of a gang leader, a suave, crafty, intelligent, ruthless sort of person, who lives by his wits and holds the fate of a hundred henchmen in his hand, who is a menace to society—hated, feared, scorned. And who, may I ask, have you cast to play the role? Who?"

"Donald Fairweather! Of all people, he certainly comes the farthest from being a gangster type! A good actor, yes. But—if you'll excuse my saying so—a rather effeminate sort of person. A master of love scenes. Sentimental, romantic, a direct appeal to the sympathetic instincts of women!"

"Rot!"

Director Tod Philloon rapped the table top and glared.

"Now Heyward, you listen to me. I've been in the movie making game a long time. It's my business. I can't do anything else. And if you'll forgive my immodesty, I've made some pretty good pictures. If I hadn't been able to cast my roles correctly, those pictures would have been flops.

"I'm not saying this to make an impression. They're facts that can't be ignored. You're a banker. You've been out here only two weeks, and at that only because your bank sent you to take charge until the company's stock was disposed of. It's senseless to think you can tell me how to make a picture. It isn't in your line. I happen to have discovered Donald Fairweather. He's versatile. He can play any part, if I direct him!"

* * *

Producer Heyward's face was a dull red.

A sneer was on his lips.

"You're quite a guy, eh, Philloon? Well, get this, either you get a real gangster type to play the role of 'Brick' Lagoon, or you're fired! There's plenty of 'em around, go pick one out."

Director Philloon stared through a window and chewed his cigar.

He could not afford to lose his job. Jobs were scarce.

Besides, he loved the work.

Moreover, this young upstart of a banking man was only a temporary fixture.

Within six months old man Levine, who knew pictures and appreciated Director Philloon's abilities, would be back on the job.

Presently Director Philloon turned.

"I'd like to make you a sporting proposition. I'll go get a gangster, a real one, true to type, and, with your approval, I'll cast him in the role of Brick Lagoon. I'll do my best to build him up and if, as you predict, he comes through, injects realism into the film, we'll use him. If he falls down, we'll play Don Fairweather!"

"Done!"

Heyward slapped the table.

He knew Philloon well enough to be assured that the director would try in all sincerity to make an actor out of the gangster.

And it was with no little feeling of triumph and relief that he agreed to the proposition.

He felt certain that his own ideas on the matter were correct, and that Director Philloon had a surprise coming to him.

* * *

He stood up.

"Just one thing more, Philloon. When selecting your man, remember that this film is actually a character sketch of the well-known gang leader, Tony Scarbo. Pick some one who at least resembles Scarbo in appearance."

"I'll bear it in mind," Philloon agreed.

Two days later Director Philloon entered Producer Heyward's private office in company with a tall, black-haired, olive-skinned youth, who smiled almost whimsically at the producer, but kept his hand in his coat pocket.

"Meet 'Sliver' Johnson, Heyward. He's your gangster type, all right."

"I'm not so sure. Acts like one, but looks like a gigolo. Had any experience, Sliver?"

"Experience?"

"I mean have you been in the racketeering game long? Know any real gangsters? Ever taken part in a gunfight?"

"I getcha. The answer is 'yes.' I usta work with Scarbo."

Heyward looked pleased, then suspicious.

"Uh, huh. Where's Scarbo now?"

"On the lam. Hidin' out till the Hennesey killing blows over. They're tryin' to pin it on him. Mob's scattered till Tony sends out word for us to join him some place."

* * *

Heyward pursed his lips, thought a moment.

Then: "O. K., Sliver. We need an actor. Gangster type. One who can give us the real thing. You ought to qualify if you've worked for Scarbo. We know you can't act, but Philloon will take care of that. That's his business."

He was front page news.

Big stuff.

Glamorous.

A murderer.

It was Philloon's plan to commercialize the idea.

Build a picture around Scarbo.

Sell him to the theater-going public.

Even Heyward could see the possibilities.

But Heyward insisted on realism.

That's why Sliver Johonson was cast in the leading role.

But Sliver didn't make good.

Philloon knew he wouldn't, even though he did his best to make an actor of the youth.

At the end of a month even Heyward could see that the picture would be a flop, with Sliver playing the lead.

Heyward blamed it on to Philloon.

* * *

"He isn't a gangster, that's what's the trouble. He's a dud. Put one over on us. If he was the real thing he could play the part."

Heyward spat and chewed his cigar.

"You can't tell me that dumb cluck is a gangster. Gangsters are gorillas. This bird's a sissy. I was doubtful from the start."

"Listen, Heyward, I'm telling you Sliver's a member of the Scarbo mob. I know it. That's the trouble with him. He's a racketeer, not an actor. Acting isn't in his line, no more than making pictures is in yours. Now, take Don Fairweather. Don's an actor. I can make a gangster out of him. It's his line, and it's my line."

"Nuts! We gotta have realism. We gotta have a real gangster. We gotta have some one who looks and acts and talks like Scarbo. It's Scarbo we're selling, isn't it? Well, use your head!"

Philloon got purple.

He was a little tired of being told what an idiot he was.

"Listen, Heyward, we made a deal. If your gangster didn't make good, I could use Fairweather in the picture? How about it?"

"It's O. K. and it stands. But first you gotta give a real gangster a tryout. This Sliver bird is a dud, a joke. He looks about as much like a gangster as I, and acts less like one."

* * *

Philloon smiled, triumph and contentment lighting his eyes.

"Listen, Heyward, you're the one who's nuts. Try usin' your noodle for once. Do you think for a second I could get one of Scarbo's mob up here when they're all on the lam? You must be crazy. Say, if the cops knew we had a Scarbo man here they'd be up and third-degree him so quick you wouldn't know what it's all about. Scarbo's wanted by the police and wanted bad. He knows it, too. And he's having a tough time keeping out of sight. So what? So he hears about this picture of ours and comes browsing around. He drops in at my office the day after you and I have our talk. I make a deal with him. I show him to you. We sign him on. Fine! He couldn't be in a safer spot. Then you crab his act by saying he doesn't look like a real gangster. He's gotta get out and start dodging the police again. So what? Well, Heyward, I guess you gotta admit I'm right. Acting isn't in Scarbo's line. He's a gangster. A killer, Heyward, and he doesn't like you at all."

Heyward's face was pale.

He sputtered, choked.

"Say, look here, Philloon. Now, listen, you better keep him on the pay roll awhile. Sure, that's it, keep him on. Pick your own lead, but keep Scarbo on. I'll leave it to your judgment. I gotta be getting back to New York, anyhow. Leaving tonight. You take things over here, but keep Scarbo on the pay roll—"

Philloon wiped his forehead and sat down in the chair vacated by Producer Heyward and grinned.

Some day, he told himself, he'd have to look up this Scarbo guy and see what he looked like.

Mistake at Big Convention

Ohio was represented at the Republican national convention in 1884 by the big four—Foraker, McKinley, Hanna and William H. West. As he spoke, West, a blind lawyer of Bellefontaine, sat in a chair. An orator of unusual ability, he was known throughout the state as "Blind Man Eloquent." When he came to the climax, the time at which he meant to shout the name of James G. Blaine, he half rose from his chair and shouted by mistake the name of James A. Garfield. West immediately realized his mistake, and again half rising from his chair he shouted the name of James G. Blaine, but in the confusion few heard him. Ohio's Garfield had been dead three years.

Words With Double Meanings

In Northumberland the word "canny" has a meaning different to that which is inseparably connected with Scotland—prudent, careful, crafty, etc. On Tyneside "canny" is an embodiment of all that is kindly, good and gentle. The highest compliment that can be paid to any person by a true Northumberlan is to say that he or she is "canny." As "home expresses the English love of the fireside, so on Tyneside does "canny" express every home virtue. All that is good and lovable in a man or woman is covered by the expression, "Eh, what a canny body." Thus also the word "homely"—which in England means restful, homelike—Canadians use the word to indicate ugliness—an ill-favored person.

Clothes That Go Out for Good Time

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

NOW that everybody's taking to biking or roller skating regardless of age, and since all the world seems to be seeking tennis or golf grounds or sunny beaches where to frolic summer hours away, creators of fashion are kept busy thinking up apparel suitable for time, place and the game.

The grand thing about play-togs, whether you are young or old or in the between years, is that in these modern times they are so entirely set free from old-time rules and restrictions. The idea nowadays is that your clothes simply must not be cumbersome. They must permit untrammeled freedom of action and they must be as chic as they are "comfy."

Which explains why the shorts outfits have become so overwhelmingly popular. In this type of costume designers have not left anything undone that should be done to work out the problems down to the minutest detail of "style," plus service and comfort.

The fact that sports clothes are so skillfully designed is not their only lure for there is another element which enters into the scheme of things that lends infinitely to the zest of sportsy attire—the materials employed. Such cottons! Such linens! They are that swagger, that colorful, that altogether intriguing, one can scarcely comprehend that they come under the humble classification of utilitarian washable weaves.

Speaking of the new cotton, there is the new pukker stripe seersucker with its brilliant bands of color alternating with multicolored hair-line stripes, and the new cabana twill which is particularly smart in string color and the candy stripe nubby yarn cotton which, seeing, you will not be able to resist and those spongy rugged herringbone cotton coatings which are so attractive the more so in that they tailor like a woolen and wash like a pocket handkerchief—cotton weaves the likes of which would not have seemed possible in years of yore.

The same is true about the marvelous linens which have come out this season.

No one can say that the shorts ensemble shown to the right in the picture is anything but a winner in the arena of fashion. As to being thoroughly practical this threesome which adds a jacket and an easy-to-take-off-and-on skirt to a shorts outfit is about the best thing that ever happened in the way of a sports costume. This model is made of Irish linen in a thrilling shade of sail red. In her hand the young lady carries a new waterproof beach kit equipped with everything which will serve as first aid to seashore beauty.

The beach shorts to the left in the group is also made of linen of the coveted uncrushable type. It is in natural color and is tailored to a nicety, has the big sailor collar which is so important this season and buttons conveniently at each side.

Just to prove that in the new cottons the new linens have a most dangerous rival in the contest now going on for highest honors, we submit to admiring eyes the goodlooking shorts centered in the group. They are made of a ripple-tex seersucker and as everybody knows there's nothing smarter in the realm of washable weaves than gay seersucker—a perfect answer to summer wardrobe needs—crisp, cool, sturdy, tubable.

BEACH TOGS BUILT ON SAILOR LINES

Half the beach clothes in the country are built along sailor lines, so style dispatches say. But it's in accessories and trims the fad gets into its full swing.

Rope is all over the place. Instead of straps, bathing suits now use woven yarn resembling rope. Separate belts come in the same thing.

Buckles used to be just buckles, but now they're anchors. Rope belts, particularly, are hitched up garnish play suits of the more rough and ready type in the most surprising places, at the back where the straps cross, in the apex of a front V.

Matched Scarf and Glove Sets New Feature Mode

Nowadays it would never do to walk out in a pair of gloves that didn't match anything, in this day of passionate ensembling, when even your shoestrings have to match the color of your tie, or something.

Confronted with the difficulty of matching gloves to hats, as somebody timidly suggested at the beginning of the season, the cagey designers have now hit on the idea of presenting glove and scarf ensembles. And very nice they are, too.

Consider, for instance, the pictorial possibilities of a bow of sheer chiffon milanese under your chin, matched by gloves of the same gosamer fabric. Or of a frilled organdie collar on your best dark sheer frock, with matching organdie cuffed gloves.

Velvet-Ribbon Trimming

Velvet ribbons in lighter or darker colors than the frock, especially in shades of lighter blue on navy, or in bright red or green on white, make an effective trimming.

Plaid Madras Accents

Plaid madras from the West Indies, glass, string, leather and wood are strung together in fascinating array to accent summer playtime clothes for the country.

TOT'S BEACH OUTFIT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Beach fashions for wee folks show such novel ensembles as this. The deftly pleated shorts are bright blue. The anchor trimming on the little white blouse with the new halter neck, lends no end of fascination to this cunning juvenile costume. The beach hat is a la Chinoise which shows how truly a style-conscious little lady is she who posed for this amusing and most delightful fashion picture. Sun suits for tiny tots are being made of mere scraps of material with a halter neckline and the entire back exposed to the sun's health-giving rays. Their cunning details bring a smile.

SYNOPSIS

On her way to a faculty position in Lostland Academy, Janet Mercer meets a young man, Arthur Fleming, also on his way to the Academy. At the railroad station they meet Mrs. Denver, engaged as matron. At the school the group is struck by an air of mystery pervading the place. Gordon Haskell, proprietor, welcomes them. Wilton Payne completes the Academy faculty. In a schoolroom Janet finds a group, which the teachers had supposed were scholars, are really highly artistic wax figures.

"Certainly we would be only too glad," Payne answered, quite sure that he spoke for all of them. "To have students eager for education smooths a teacher's road."

"Exactly. But there is one pupil of—of another class, Berenice Bracebridge, the youngest daughter of the late Dr. Jethro Bracebridge."

He paused impressively, as if the announcement must change their entire conception of the state of affairs in Lostland academy. "It is chiefly for her that this whole arrangement exists; I am her guardian and the sole trustee of the estate, and under the terms of her father's will she is to receive her education at Lostland academy until she comes into control of her own fortune at twenty-one. I have undertaken much of her education myself, with the aid of various governesses—to comply with the spirit of the will, if not the letter; but lately she has demanded certain subjects on which, I have no hesitancy in saying, I am not an authority.

"Now you see the reason for your high salaries. I couldn't really, could I, ask specialists on these subjects to bury themselves in these hills for the sake of one young girl—lovely and intelligent as she is? And, since you are in Lostland, I wanted the farmers' children to share the advantages which you are bringing to Berenice."

Janet felt acute remorse that she had so misjudged this man, who could throw open the doors of the old academy to boys and girls stranded on these hills. "I think that is most kind and generous of you."

He waved his hand to indicate that it did not signify. "You will not find Berenice difficult, though, of course, she has had very little of the usual life of young girls."

"May I ask a question, sir?"—this from Arthur.

"As many as you like."

"Are you a relative of Miss Bracebridge?"

"No; the fact is, I was the adopted son of Mrs. Henry Haskell, of California, and I took her name. When I was about twenty-seven my adopted mother became the second wife of Doctor Jethro Bracebridge and stepmother to his five children, of whom Berenice was the youngest and then four years old. I was an instructor in a western college, but my adopted mother's marriage led to my taking a position as teacher of foreign languages in this academy, which thirteen years ago was in a very flourishing condition—" He paused and looked about the circle with his keen, restless eyes.

"I—I presume there were then—a number of deaths?" Payne said.

"Yes, Doctor Bracebridge's long illness—and a number of deaths. Doctor Bracebridge did me the honor to rely on me, to trust me; hence," he smiled rather wearily, "this strange situation! A rather lonely girl to be educated in a great academy to comply with the terms of a rather singular will; though, of course, all wills are singular to some one. As trustee I do not receive enough to keep this great place in order—"

"But couldn't you turn it into what it was in the days of its glory?"

"No—there's an obstacle," he said stubbornly. He looked at his watch. "Well, any more questions?"

"Do your pupils ever study by moonlight, sir?"

He turned quite pale. "Oh, I'll explain that circumstance—very slight—very odd, yet it has held up the whole situation here. Not now. It's after nine, and I think I heard the day pupils coming in the side entrance. As they cannot pay much, they tend the vegetable garden in the summer; and two are told off to look after the two furnaces, and to bring coal up to the cook in winter.

"Now it is nine; and we begin work at nine," he continued. "You will take the study with the glass door, Miss Mercer; and Mr. Payne, you will turn down the hall on the right as you face the staircase; and the first door you come to will be your schoolroom; and next Mr. Fleming's. We have thirty pupils. Each of you will have ten for one hour; and teach three hours at a stretch. At noon you will have recreation until one; and the students a study hour. At one, lunch will be served here for the three of you. At two, the students, who have their lunch in another dining room, will begin three forty-five minute shifts of reciting back to you what you taught them in the morning; and you will give out tasks to be done in the evening in their homes; and by Berenice here. That will bring us to about 3:45 in the afternoon; or, allowing for inevitable delays, four o'clock; making [illegible] five teaching hours a day. From four o'clock on your time is your own."

"Where is the library?" asked Payne.

"Across the hall from here. I'll show you."

He led the way to a room which Janet thought gloomy in the extreme; but it was well stocked with books, which Payne examined eagerly. Then they went to their respective classrooms.

In hers, Janet found a number of boys and girls at the clumsy desks, and among them the girl she was most eager to behold—Berenice Bracebridge—who would, Janet thought, have arrested anyone's attention anywhere by her singular type of beauty. She seemed to be of those who look proudly out on life—but are not proud; a slender, aloof creature. Her features—where had Janet seen before the short upper lip, the thick lashes, the delicate skin, the abundant fair hair, the eyes with their expression of wanting to understand something which they could not understand? She rose gracefully as Janet entered, and looked about on her fellow students. They seemed to be nice boys and girls; and they rose rather uncertainly, following Miss Bracebridge's example.

"I think we're all here—and we are very glad to see you," she said half shyly.

Janet was unaccountably nervous, and she felt a certain uneasiness in her pupils. Their eyes wandered to the corridor, even when she was sure they were most attentive. In a rather shaky voice she opened her subject, a kind of prologue of the glories of English literature from Chaucer down.

The hour came to an end quickly. As Berenice passed her desk she held out her hand. "Thank you! You made things live. It's good to make things live."

"It's Good to Make Things Live."

Janet felt relieved, grateful, almost happy again. She left her platform and went to raise a window higher. When she returned other pupils were entering the room, and on her desk lay a folded note addressed simply "The Teacher." She slipped it into her bag, for Gordon Haskell was approaching in his quiet, quick way which reminded her of a leopard's movements. His sleek, shining hair, his dark eyes, and rather elongated rounded nose emphasized his appearance.

"Well, how did you get along?"

"Very well—thank you!"

"I am glad you are not nervous. Some of my governesses have been—very nervous."

His face had a cruel expression; and she recalled an old painting she had once seen of the burning of a witch in Salem, and of the pale, intense Puritan countenances lit up by the flames of the bonfire in the midst of which a woman writhed. The thought crossed her mind that she would be glad when Berenice ceased to be the ward of this man.

Meanwhile the object of this wish sat in the third schoolroom and listened to Wilton Payne's introduction of his subject. He had been expecting her all the morning, but she did not come until the third hour; a radiant creature, he thought, in her rather gay little mountain suit of copper-colored corduroy, the coat worn over a plain white silk blouse. Her serious young face recalled to his mind faces he had seen on canvases, in the National gallery: adorably delicate, almost whimsical in expression yet with a kind of sadness when the features were in repose.

She spoke at last—asked him some simple question. Her voice thrilled him, and its quality brought to him many memories, as the spiritual essence of a sound or a fragrance can always do. He had not heard such a voice outside of Europe, and then only echoes of it—the soprano notes of singing boys, gondoliers in Venice—the gentle voices of girls going like a flock of white doves to their first communion.

Excavations at Pompeii

Pompeii was buried under lava from an eruption of Mount Vesuvius more than 2,000 years ago. It was the most beautiful city in Italy. From the ruins scientists have learned much of ancient civilization. Archeological expeditions from almost every country have visited the site of Pompeii, but in recent years the most extensive excavations have been carried on under auspices of the Italian government.

Long days and longer nights, snow and ice, and northern lights and through it all the mad lure of gold—these will be recalled as the old Sourdoughs of the Alaska-Yukon gold rush days join at Tacoma August 16 to 19 in the sixth annual International Sourdough reunion.

Tacoma's Sourdough Club, reunion sponsors this year, invite to the four-day meting all the old pioneers of the Klondyke and Nome stampedes and in addition all others who have followed various trails into the Yukon, Northern British Columbia and Alaska, according to George A. Calvert, president of the host organization.

Numerous committees working with D. E. Griffith of Auburn, convention manager, are hard at work to make this reunion especially notable and inviting.

"We have sent thousands of invitations," said Calvert, "but only by a general invitation of this kind can we expect to reach all of them who are eligible and who should attend the Tacoma metings. We are overlooking no detail to provide an all-around good time for everybody. I hope any of the Sourdoughs interested will drop us a line at P. O. Box 1203, Tacoma, so we can advise them personally of our plans."

The Board of Trustees of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce went on record this week as favoring the establishment of an "adequate" air base in Alaska, but decided to leave the selection of the site to "competent military, naval and aeronautical authorities."

Alaska's delegate to Congress, Anthony J. Dimon of Valdez, has a bill before Congress providing for an appropriation of $15,800,000 for a military base and air field at Fairbanks. The city of Anchorage is also a contender for the site of the military base.

PROMINENT SPEAKERS FOR MARKET WEEK

With General Hugh S. Johnson, NRA chief, and Richard Neustadt, managing director of the National Retail Code Authority, looming as speakers at the San Francisco Fall Market Week, the Manufacturers and Wholesalers Association is preparing for the largest market week in the history of the coast, August 6 to 10.

Ten thousand invitations have just been mailed for the event to merchants and buyers of men's, women's and children's apparel throughout the West, Alaska and the Islands, by the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce.

According to Capen A. Fleming, general manager of the Manufacturers and Wholesalers Association, reservations for display space by manufacturers and wholesalers began coming in eight weeks ago, with the probability that three floors of the Palace Hotel will be required to care for the extensive exhibits of new fall and winter styles.

The upward trend of business which became apparent at the February market week, has increased steadily until now factories are working at top speed filling orders and developing new creations worth thousands of dollars, which will appear at the August market week.

ise him and the other department officers their 100 per cent support.

At the Legion picnic, held Sunday, July 15, the V. F. W. ball players again showed their superiority by trouncing the American Legion players by the score of 15 to 11 in nine regulation innings. The final return game will be played in Daly City on Sunday, July 29. Watch these columns for final announcement. Come out and see the fun. There will be a barrel of something—possibly everything but baseball as it should be played.

The committees have been selected and are working on the first combined veteran affair in Daly City, to be held in the not too far future. The V. F. W. and the American Legion are working tirelessly on this affair and they promise lots more of advertising, a real large evening to everyone who attends. There will be many attractions, besides numerous door prizes. Watch for more details each week.

OPTIMISTIC VIEWS EXTRACTED FROM EVERY DAY LIFE

(By Lillian Landini)

Life is joy, and love is power,
Death all fetters doth unbind;
Strength and wisdom only flower
When we toil for all our kind.—Lowell.

There are days of happiness and outstanding successes, in our lives, that each and every one of us would give much to live in reality again.

Why can't we have those days and hours again?

It is not the world that is amiss.

It is just you, and just me.

Let us stop a moment and think! Perhaps I might have said: A good half hour out of twenty-four of deep and sincere thought would awaken our listless mood and clarify our vision of the everyday beauties and benefits that make life worth while.

This time for concentration would be an invaluable education. It would lessen our burdens and magnify our blessings. A half hour daily, given to kind thoughts, finer plans and, most of all, in trying to express our appreciation for the benefits received from our Great Creator.

No matter what strife we pass through, or hardships we endure, let us be thankful to Him who has given us a duty to perform. Thankful for the opportunity to help others in these times of misunderstanding. Let us be calm and wise in our direction of those who need our advice, and courageous in our decisions.

May God help each and every one of us to decide rightly, in the performance of his or her duty to God and man.

No matter what role in life we fill, let us place ourselves in the place of the one being criticized — fairly, squarely and justly. May the power of love predominate and destroy forever "man's inhumanity to man that makes countless thousands mourn"!

Get-Together Party

Mr. Peter Morgan of Niantic avenue entertained a group of his neighbors, Thursday evening of last week, at a get-together party at his home.

The evening was spent in dancing, after which dainty refreshments were served to the guests, including: Mr. and Mrs. McSherry, Mr. and Mrs. G. Stahl and daughter Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. John Statham, Mr. and Mrs. P. V. Callahan, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Lindorff and daughter Ruth, Mrs. Verna Eames and daughter Marjorie, Miss Doris Davis, Charles Jones and Peter Morgan Jr.

A musical prodigy who knows his instruments is 9-year-old Jackie Held, of St. Louis, who showed audiences in England and Ireland a thing or two about conducting orchestras.

W. H.
CLAY
A Candidate For
JUSTICE of the PEACE

It is well known and recognized among lawyers that some of the most intricate and perplexing questions of law arise in the minor courts, such as the Municipal and Justices' Courts of California. The proper solution of such questions of law is of most vital importance to those engaged in litigation to recover their rights or have redress for wrongs. The administration of justice in such courts, as in all courts, should be entrusted only to those whose learning and experience in the law qualifies them for the office.

W. H. Clay, of Daly City, is a candidate for the office of Justice of the Peace of the First Township of San Mateo County at the primary election to be held August 28, 1934. His reputation for honesty and integrity is well known, and if elected he will bring to the office the experience of over twenty-five years active practice of law in all the courts of the State of California, and in the United States District Courts.

DALY CITY OFFICIALS ATTEND WATER MEET

Among the city officials from various municipalities who attended the banquet and election of officers of the Peninsula Water Works Association on Thursday evening of last week were Mayor H. H. Smith and Councilman Henry Sundermann and Superintendent A. J. Bodien.

The trio motored to San Mateo, where the meeting was held at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel.

Talks on the excellence of Daly City water were given by the mayor and the councilman, and it was unanimously agreed by the gathering that Daly City has the finest water on the peninsula.

The membership of this association is composed of the municipalities extending from San Francisco to San Jose.

It Don't Pay to Forget

A truck driver working for Angelo Olcese of Colma forgot his permit to operate a truck through Colma to San Francisco last Saturday afternoon, and as a result his truck, loaded with hog food, was taken from him.

Later, the truck was returned to the driver by members of the San Francisco police department, and from the county line until the truck reached Colma it was escorted by members of the Daly City police department.

Had the driver not forgotten to carry his permit with him he would not have been molested.
